— THE MASTER CAMPAIGN

What will we become?

One question, asked by Montara across all brands and touchpoints.

WHY IT EXISTS

The question every child is asked — returned to every generation.

- ◆ Asked of the child, the parent, the grandparent | answered together, as families
- ◆ Family is the key – and Montara itself is a family, the first to ask what it will become
- ◆ The campaign never answers its own question aloud | everything on the estate answers it quietly, always the same way: a more meaningful way to live

— WHY MONTARA LEADS IT

What will Montara become?

A Thai family-owned hospitality group – owner and developer of Phuket's most personal luxury destinations since Trisara, 2004. Here is what becoming looks like, this year and next.

— THE BRAND BEHIND THE QUESTION

PATAMA

The wellbeing brand of Montara Hospitality Group
Threading all the good things in life together.

— THE IDEA & THE NAME

One word, three readings.

Looking after yourself and your family takes more than one form. PATAMA brings these together into one way of living well, across our places in Phuket – not an occasional escape, but the shape of an ordinary day.

- ◆ I · The Beginning | wellbeing in everyday life – the table, the body, the family | Pali
- ◆ II · The Lotus | the daily waking of the practice – body and land emerging together | Sanskrit
- ◆ III · The Family's Name | a name held across generations – a way of patama living, still lived | Thai ·

KEY CONCEPT

You are always becoming.

There is no final destination – only a continuous unfolding. At the heart of PATAMA is a single idea: a life is never finished. Grounded in science, art & soul: our bodies and minds can keep changing and growing at any age. What will you become?

The eight promises to create a more meaningful way of life.

THE INNER LIFE

Internal Harmony

THE OUTER WORLD

External Harmony

Eight promises, woven into one — a common language, lived a little differently in every place.

01

— THE INNER LIFE

Vitality

The body is not a vehicle to be maintained until it fails. It is a biological system that responds to daily inputs – movement, nourishment and rest can influence how a person ages.

Your body will function at its best — energised, strong, biologically younger.

02

— THE INNER LIFE

Serenity

Serenity is not the absence of stress. It is the practised capacity to absorb life's pressures and return to equilibrium – without being diminished by them.

You will face life's pressures without being defined by them.

— THE INNER LIFE

Clarity

A mind that is sharp, regulated and free from unnecessary noise is the instrument through which all other wellbeing is reached. Attention and resilience are trainable capacities.

Your mind will become sharper, calmer, and more certain.

04

— THE INNER LIFE

Growth

The person who stops becoming begins to contract. Personal growth is a core dimension of a well-lived life — and uniquely, it has no ceiling. It is not a destination, but a way of inhabiting life.

You will keep becoming — stretching, discovering, expanding — for the rest of your life.

05

— THE OUTER WORLD

Belonging

One of the longest studies of adult life reaches a conclusion that supersedes most others: the quality of relationships shapes the quality of life. Community is not an amenity. It is a determinant of how long and how well people live.

You will be held by relationships and a community that strengthen you.

06

— THE OUTER WORLD

Sanctuary

The places people live are not neutral containers for health; they are active determinants of it. Through biophilic design, the architecture of where you live can shape the biology of how you age.

Your environment — physical, natural and social — will protect and restore you.

07

— THE OUTER WORLD

Purpose

A life directed by what matters most is associated with greater health, resilience and longevity. Purpose is not ambition. It is the quiet, clarifying sense of why that filters every decision and makes ordinary life meaningful.

You will live with a clear sense of why — and it will shape every day.

— THE OUTER WORLD

Wonder

Human beings are meaning-making creatures who need encounters with beauty, culture and the extraordinary to feel fully alive. Wonder is the practice of encountering the extraordinary – cultivated, not merely consumed.

You will encounter beauty and transcendence that expand what you believe is possible.
